Al Wiggins, Jr.
COMMISSIONER

The City of Atlanta Department of Watershed Management (DWM) has been recognized as a Leading Utility of the World as we continue to distinguish ourselves as leaders in innovation, service and value.

DWM is using innovative technologies to become a Smart Utility by leveraging digital processes to upgrade and maintain critical infrastructure. DWM has implemented a pilot program to allow testing of new technologies focused on reducing water loss in the distribution network. This includes the installation of sensors within a defined area of the water distribution system to collect data on potential locations vulnerable to water loss.

You will see crews deploying these devices at select meters, valves and fire hydrants. These actions are not anticipated to cause any service disruptions. Once the pilot efforts are completed, field crews will retrieve the deployed sensors.
